LAAKH

An exclusive range formed out of our experimentation with lacquer work on wood. This & That takes a fresh approach on a technique extensively employed on toys and smaller pieces of wood by applying it to our contemporary designs. The collection evokes your senses wielding the age-old craft of maneuvering colored lacquer on hand-carved wooden furniture. The lacquer work is applied in bright shades and patterns quintessential to the craft.

KAPUS

This and That in collaboration with Anahita brings to you a collection of organic cotton, khadi home textiles. The collection has been named Kapus, after the organically cultivated cotton all our products are made with. The cotton comes from the fields of Maharashtra and is spun by hand and handwoven into beautifully textured khadi fabrics, ranging from heavy to ethereal sheers in fine counts. The collection explores the basic elements of dot and line, bindu and rekha, in various configurations through hand block printing and other creative printing techniques. Our designs are also repositories of the flora we found along the way. The leaves of the palaash tree and bordi plant have been imprinted with pigment onto cushions and napkins. The collection is rounded off with our quilted bed covers that have been painted by hand using pigment and textured brushes. With age-old techniques such as block printing and natural dyeing assimilating beautifully with more experimental surfaces, we have created a range of textiles unique in texture and template.
